BLOS Lingual Study Club a huge success

In November, orthodontists and members of the British Lingual Orthodontic Society (BLOS) gathered in London for the group's first Lingual Study Club since Dr Sunil Hirani took on the role of Chairman.

The event saw clinicians travelling from as far afield as Greece and Egypt to hear Dr Steffen Decker's presentation on 'The power of Incognito™ and Digital Workflow'.

Dr Sunil Hirani, comments: "BLOS study clubs are designed to be a true learning forum with debate, discussion of existing research, critical thinking and how one can implement ideas from a presentation the very next day clinically so patients benefit.

Dr Decker gave a beautiful presentation on the strengths and weaknesses of an appliance system, how to troubleshoot various clinical areas and showed many cases he had learned from with a self-critical approach and what he would do differently today. This hugely benefits our members and the study club was full to capacity.

At the time of going to print the feedback is still coming in, but so far over 90% of the delegates have rated the event as 'excellent'."

The evening also benefited a fantastic cause, raising £320 for CLAPA – BLOS' nominated charity. This is the first time a donation has ever been made by the Society to such a worthy cause.

For those who couldn't make the trip to London, the presentation was recorded and will be shared with BLOS members. This again is the first undertaking of its kind by BLOS.

Plans are already underway for the next two study clubs. In February 2018, Dr Megan Hatfield will be sharing her experience of dental awards as both a winning participant and judge in a talk titled 'Dental awards, why bother?'.

Then in November 2018, Dr Germain Becker will be flying in from Luxembourg to discuss 'Excellence in lingual management: Class II and Class III surgical and non-surgical cases'.
